Buys new clothes for the victims they are grooming to begin the process of molding them into their new identities. The victims are taught to keep their new wardrobe a secret from their parents.

K-12 provides "transition closets" for students to change into different clothes than they came to school in. This is part of the process of molding them into their new identities. Students change out of their new wardrobe at the end of the day to keep it a secret from their parents.

Employ a "lover boy" technique to "love bomb" their victims. They make the victim feel special by showering them with attention and gifts. This "favoritism" creates a bond and trust between the sex trafficker and victim.

K-12 teachers and school counselors "love bomb" students with attention and Transgender paraphernalia. They make the victim feel special with invitations to secret clubs, attention, and rewards for being a "good ally." This "favoritism" creates a bond and trust between the Transgender recruiter and victim.

Use the fear of being "socially outcasted" to keep the victim inline and obedient.
